Geographical Investigation 2013

The State Examinations Commission has released the Geographical Investigation prescribed topics for submission in spring 2013. In order to prepare students for undertaking this project, we are currently putting together programmes for the following two titles:

- A study of local traffic patterns.
Fieldwork undertaken for this study will be undertaken in Enniskillen.
- Test the hypothesis that erosion is an active process in a fluvial or glacial or coastal environment.
Fieldwork for this study will be undertaken on the River Sillees.

Further information on these sessions (both standard length and extended days) will be available at www.field-studies-council.org/outdoorclassroom/ireland/republic in February 2012. As in previous years, these sessions will also incorporate the introduction, planning, gathering of data and results, conclusions and analysis aspects of the report and, for extended days, the completion of graphs. Should you wish to complete fieldwork to meet the requirements of a different topic, please don't hesitate to contact the centre to discuss the fieldwork opportunities we can offer.
