Knowledge Level

This course is open to participants with no previous diving experience. All you need is an interest in going scuba diving.

Individuals must be at least 10 years old and be comfortable in UK water.

A medical form will need to be completed prior to in-water sessions and individuals with certain conditions may need to have the form signed by their GP. Guidance is provided on the form.

Prior Knowledge

None! As part of the experience participants will complete a small amount of theory to develop their knowledge of scuba diving and promote safety during the in-water experience.

About the Instructors

During the scuba diving experience, the participants will be looked after by at least one instructor and a support diver (sometimes another instructor). Below are two of the dive team that you may meet:

James Harman - Lead Instructor - LANGUAGES: English & Spanish.

James is a Marine Biology graduate who learnt to dive on the Costa Brava in Spain and then fell in love with UK diving. He has now been an instructor for 8 years in the UK with over 2,000 dives across the length and breadth of the country.

His passion is exploring new dive sites; uncovering new reefs full of marine life and finding other interesting features for other divers to explore.

His experience spans recreational, technical and commercial diving as well as dive safety and expedition management. You'll often find him leading the dive trips and not getting around to the admin that the office team are constantly chasing him for.

Rie Pors – Divemaster - LANGUAGES: English, Danish & Spanish

Rie has always thought that all the sea creatures were weird and cool, she loves water and she got into scuba diving as soon as she could.

She completed her open water in Panama when she was 17 and finished rescue and commercial training in Denmark.

She is a biologist and she works as a marine environmental scientist, spending most of her time identifying marine life or collecting videos and samples off of ships.

Her favourite dive site is in Loch Leven but she is always up to explore new sites!

Further detail about the course

Discover scuba diving experiences will generally include two dives which are often run back to back.

Before getting in the water the dive professionals will assist students with donning and checking their equipment including the dry suit (much warmer than wearing wetsuits!). Once everyone is happy with the equipment a dive briefing will take place before entering the water so that everyone is aware of what the plan is and can ask any questions that they may have.

The first dive is done in standing depth water where participants will get used to the equipment and put into practice some of the knowledge that they learnt previously. During this first dive instructors will also teach some basic skills to help participants be both safe and comfortable during the second dive.

Providing that participants demonstrated confidence on the first dive and were able to complete the necessary skills there will be an opportunity to dive deeper to a maximum depth of 12 metres.

The two dives normally take place over about 3-4 hours and this includes transport, getting equipped, briefings, dives and debriefs.

There will be at least two dive professionals in the water to every 4 participants and there will also be cover on the surface while participants are in the water.

If there are more than 4 participants, then up to 3 groups of 4 can be taken diving in a day providing that there is sufficient daylight and that weather conditions are appropriate. Alternatively, more professionals can be added to accommodate larger groups.
